Difference between List, List>, List, List, and List

The notation `List>` means "a list of something (but I'm not saying what)". Since the code in test works for any kind of object in the list, this works as a formal method parameter. Using a type parameter

[What is the difference between list and list \[1:\] in Python?](#)

By using a `:` colon in the list index, you are asking for a slice, which is always another list. In Python you can assign values to both an individual item in a list, and to a slice of the list.

What is the difference between list and

[list \[:\] in python?](#)

When reading, list is a reference to the original list, and list[:] shallow-copies the list. When assigning, list (re)binds the name and list[:] slice-assigns, replacing what was previously in the list.
